Some headcanons about pre-Tree Wars SilkWings

When there was still a forest, SilkWings lived in massive silk web-nests hung in, around, and between trees, like ermine moth larvae (look it up sometime).

Brown, mothlike SilkWings and colorful, butterfly-like SilkWings were once separate and isolated populations, rarely intermixing and probably geographically divided in some way (north-south maybe? or the brown SilkWings lived in Pantala's northwestern mountains?). They've slowly grown together over time, though.

Yeah! They also probably had a special clearing dedicated to SilkWings going through Metamorphasis. Or maybe each family had their own room for that? The LeafWings and SilkWings might've struggled over territory, because if SilkWings lived in trees and LeafWings lived in trees, then they would probably have debates over who would get which trees.
